Marine environments in Eastern Asia are of great economic significance. In total, the region accounts for 47% of global fishing and 87% of international marine culture.

In addition to these sectors, marine-related tourism is also highly profitable to many countries in the area. Unfortunately, development for tourism can increase sediment in coastal waters, destroying coral reefs in such places as Indonesia and Malaysia. But it is fishing that is providing the area with the economic resources needed to develop, and with the protein the local people need to survive.

Marine environments face destruction from pollution. Polluted rivers, industrial excess, ports, and ship contaminants all contribute to this problem. Almost 70% of all waste dumped into the Pacific Ocean has undergone no treatment.

Heavy-metal contamination is becoming a severe problem because of industrial effluents and land-based waste being dumped into the oceans. These substances can deeply influence the natural ecosystems of the area, often affecting the local food chain.

Pollution of marine environments can also come from oil spills or sea transportation. Every year, the Bay of Bengal receives 400,000 tons of oil pollution. Exploring for natural resources and developing resources in the oceans also inevitably produces harmful pollution.

There are many reasons for both sides of questions. Should we have printed advertisements? Many people have strong views and feel that advertisements are nothing more than useless junk mail, while other people feel they are important sources of information.

Here are some reasons why we should have advertisements in newspaper and magazines. One reason is advertisements give us information about what is available. Looking at advertisements we can find out what is on sale and what is new in the market. Another reason is that advertisements promote business.

On the other hand, some people argue advertisements should not be put in newspaper and magazine for these various reasons. Firstly, advertisements cost the shopkeepers a lot of money to print onto paper. Also some people don't like finding junk mail on their letter boxes. People may also find the ads not very interesting. Ads also influence people to buy items they don't need and can't really afford. Ads use up a lot of space and a lot of effort has to be made to make the ads eye catching. In summary, although advertisements provide people with information, they cost a lot of money to print.

The Fox and the Crow

A Fox once saw a Crow fly off with a piece of cheese in its beak and settle on a branch of a tree. 'That's for me, as I am a Fox,' said Master Reynard, and he walked up to the foot of the tree. 'Good-day, Mistress Crow,' he cried. 'How well you are looking to-day: how glossy your feathers; how bright your eye. I feel sure your voice must surpass that of other birds, just as your figure does; let me hear but one song from you that I may greet you as the Queen of Birds.' The Crow lifted up her head and began to caw her best, but the moment she opened her mouth the piece of cheese fell to the ground, only to be snapped up by Master Fox. 'That will do,' said he. 'That was all I wanted. In exchange for your cheese I will give you a piece of advice for the future.'
